JANET MBENE CEO's Message

The role of small and medium enterprises (SMEs) is regarded as a key source of entrepreneurship and innovation in Tanzania. SMEs play a vital role in the economic development, not only as dynamic innovative organisations, but also collectively as a constellation of organisations in supporting growth sub sectors such as agriculture and agro-processing, tourism, artisanal mining, service, industry, light manufacturing and ICT. The private sectors of many emerging economies today are hindered by a "missing middle". Investors, policy-makers and development professionals dedicate most of their efforts to either large corporations of over 500 employees or very small businesses with perhaps five employees; larger enterprises and multi-national corporations (MNCs) are frequently the main targets for tax incentives and corporate subsidies whereas only a few notable organizations like the World Bank and the United Nations Development Program and the Government and international NGOs have devoted a significant amount of attention and aid toward promoting micro-enterprises.

Linking SMEs with Finance, Markets and Technology

Small and Medium Enterprises (SMEs) are the backbone of inclusive growth, but they often struggle to access the tools that unlock their full potential. At SCD, we emphasize three critical linkages:

- Finance: SMEs need affordable, tailored financial products—credit, insurance, pensions, and investment vehicles—that match their realities. By connecting them with banks, microfinance, and innovative fintech solutions, we enable stability and growth.
- Markets: Access to markets is not just about selling goods; it's about building networks, supply chains, and partnerships. Linking SMEs to local, regional, and global markets ensures they can scale, compete, and contribute to national development.

- Technology: Digital tools—from mobile payments to e-commerce platforms and renewable energy solutions—transform how SMEs operate. Technology reduces barriers, increases efficiency, and opens new opportunities for innovation and competitiveness.

Linking SMEs with finance, markets, and technology creates a holistic ecosystem where entrepreneurs are not isolated but empowered. It's about building bridges—so that women and youth-led enterprises can thrive, sustain themselves, and drive Tanzania's economic transformation.

Women in Digital Business – Africa's Urgent Frontier

Women and youth-led SMEs in Africa stand at a crossroads. The digital economy is no longer a distant future—it is the present.

- Digitization is a lifeline: From mobile payments to e-commerce platforms, digital tools are the fastest way for women and youth entrepreneurs to overcome barriers of geography, limited capital, and restricted market access.

- Competitiveness: Those who embrace digitization now gain visibility, efficiency, and access to global markets. Those who delay risk being locked out of opportunities that are rapidly shifting online.
- Inclusion and empowerment: Digital business is not just about technology—it is about inclusion. It enables women and youth to participate fully in finance, trade, and innovation, breaking cycles of exclusion.
- No time to wait: The pace of change is unforgiving. SMEs that hesitate to digitize will find themselves left behind, while those who act boldly will lead Africa's transformation.

Milestones

1.Comprehensive Training Manual (45 Modules)

At SCD, one of our proudest milestones is the development of a 45-module Comprehensive Training Manual designed specifically for women and youth-led SMEs.

- Capacity Building: The manual equips entrepreneurs with practical skills in finance, markets, and technology—turning knowledge into competitiveness.
- Certification & Credibility: By training and certifying SMEs, we raise their profile, making them more attractive to investors, lenders, and partners.
- Financial Growth: Structured learning helps SMEs manage resources, access capital, and scale sustainably.
- Job Creation: As SMEs grow, they generate employment, open new markets, and strengthen local economies.

- Social Impact: Beyond business, empowered SMEs provide for their families, uplift communities, and contribute to national development.

This manual is more than a training tool, it is a pathway to empowerment, certification, and sustainable growth. It ensures women and youth SMEs are not just surviving, but thriving, while creating opportunities for others.

We have also:
